

31: Hofmann--623 [4] N-3
116, 514, 834, 844

(1909) 1912

Formosan Aborigines
Tsou

After the delivery, the mother cuts the sharp umbilical cord with a sharp piece of reed; the newly-born infant is washed in a brook. Both men and women are modest to a very high degree. The men who were our carriers for several days had a high sense of decency, and, if they had to relieve themselves, always hid from the rest.